HE WANTED PIE.

One of Buffalo Bill's Reminiscences of California Joe.

It isn't often that one can induce Buffalo Bill to relate anecdotes of his experiences, but when he does tell a story of some occurrence it is usually a good one.

"You see, we wanted some man who knew the country better than I did, and old California Joe happened to bounce right up in time. I was with Gen. Sheridan then, as chief of scouts, but I wasn't as well acquainted with that section of country as old Joe. I was instructed to employ him as guide, and went over and made the proposition. It wasn't no go with Joe, he didn't want the job. I begged him to accept telling him he would get $10 a day, and the General would date his time from the day the expedition started, just one month before. Now Joe says I, there's $300 slap down, as good as in your pocket already, and we'll be gone over a month, and you might as well have that dust as anybody. No, Joe wouldn't have it. All our pleadings took no effect upon him, and finally the General asked him what was the reason he wouldn't take the job when was just looking around.

Old Joe braced up and looking as proud as a frisky colt, said: 'I've been with a good many surveyin' parties, and mebbe this here expedition's all right, but I've just made up my mind that I ain't a goin' with no surveyin' expeditions any more that don't have pie' and old Joe just stuck to that pie arrangement until we had to promise him we would have pie. Hadn't claved on anything but a piece of baked buffalo or jerked deer for a year, and he was just dead stuck on eatin' pie. Well we got off and Joe was a pilafin' us all right. We reached a pile of rocks one evening, away in the Yellowstone region, where no man ever set foot before. No white man anyhow, and ever been there. There was a big pile of rocks, near where we pitched our camp, the stones looking as if they had been piled up by somebody. Soon as we set eyes on the rocks, Joe stopped. 'Waal by the jumpin' Jehu, he says he'll be comin' along with us, and that ain't his grave! 'Whose grave?' we asked. 'Why, Bill Allerton's. Yer see we was a comin' from about a hundred mile beyond here and was loaded down with gold. There was four on us and we had pack mules just a groanin' under big hanks o' gold. Well, sir, the yaller nuggets stuck all over them mules, till yer couldn't see. We had struck it rich down in a creek below here, which was just a runnin' big ez a bullter, but in course we couldn't kerry sich amity chunks an' had ter take them hanks 'fellers.' You just ought to heard Old Joe describe that gold. He had shining nuggets floatin' all over the mountain streams, and hanging to the trees. He got the party worked up to a fearful degree, and they asked all sorts of questions. Finally Joe got back to Bill Allerton and the pile of rocks. 'Waal yer see,' he said, 'Bill died sorter sudden like an' we buried him over there, and we put his gold along with him. We didn't want the stuff, but we did want mule. Yes, sir—thar lies ole Bill, under them thar rocks, and his fortune with him.'

How much do you suppose the gold amounted to? Some one asked. 'What we burned?' 'Yes.' 'Waal I reckon it must er bin nigh onto two hundred an' fifty thousand dollar 'orth.'

Old Joe finished his yarn about supper time, and after we got through eatin' he leaved over to me and says: 'Bill I'll bet yer thar ain't a man around this here camp fer night, and there wasn't. Along about midnight officers and all were having a high old time with them rocks, an' old Joe just chinked to kill himself.'

Milton. —Owing to our absence last week, the items which were prepared for the last number of the Gazette failed to appear, and that will account for the age of a number which will be found in this column.

A good joke! The President of the Provisional Amendment Association of this village received recently a circular from the Milwaukee Personal Liberal League, asking him to use his influence against the efforts of the prohibition fanatics, as they call them. They are not likely to receive much aid from him.

Mr. Leland, of Battle Creek, Mich., who has been the foreman in the "Telephone" office since its birth, was called upon yesterday to read a circular from the Milwaukee Personal Liberal League, asking him to use his influence against the efforts of the prohibition fanatics, as they call them. They are not likely to receive much aid from him.

—Messrs. J. C. Plumb and Albert Barnhart were fortunate in having quite large crops of cultivated blackberries, especially the latter. They are growing the Snyder variety and they are good to eat.

ETIQUETTE OF LETTER WRITING. (From Bill's Manual of Social and Business Forms.) As a rule every letter, unless insulting in its character, requires an answer. To neglect to answer a letter when written to is as unskillful as to neglect to reply when asked.

1. In letters of business use as few words as possible. 2. Business letters should be promptly answered. 3. Use a clear, distinct writing, avoiding all flourish of penmanship or language.

4. Come at once to your subject, and state it so clearly that it will not be necessary to guess your meaning. 5. Give town, county, State and date explicitly. It is frequently of great importance to know when a letter was written.

6. Read your letter carefully when finished, to see that you have made no omissions and no mistakes. Also carefully examine your envelope, to see that it is rightly directed, with postage stamp affixed. 7. Copy all business letters, of your own, by hand, or with the copying press made for the purpose.

8. Send money by draft, postoffice order or express, always stating in the letter the amount, and by what means sent. Thus you have something to show for the money, guaranteeing you against loss. 9. Write date and from whom received across the end of each letter, and fill for future reference, fastening the letters together with rubber bands, or binding in a letter file adapted to the purpose.

10. The possession of a letter sometimes prevents litigation and serious misunderstanding. In ordering goods state very explicitly the amount, kind, quality, color, shape, size, etc., and on what terms wanted. Whether you wish the same sent by freight or express, and what express. Much inconvenience is experienced by business men because of a neglect to designate explicitly what is wanted.

Should the writer wish to make suggestions, ask questions or add other matter to the letter, which is foreign to the subject, such words should be placed entirely separate from the order. Of the fifty or 100 letters received to-day, by the merchant, that one which is mixed up with complaints, inquiries, etc., will probably be laid over till to-morrow, or will not be read at all. It is a waste of time for the merchant to read it through. Had the order been explicitly stated, and the suggestions placed elsewhere, the goods would have been forwarded immediately.
